

Hi!

Today im talking to a talented soul – an outstanding artist from our high school. She wanted to remain anonymous, so we're gonna call her „X“. She was nice enough to draw something especially for our interview!

Martyna: Hi! Nice to see you! Let's get our interview started!

X: Hello! Sure, I can't wait!

M: Has drawing always been your passion?

X: I wouldn't call it a passion. It is more of a form to de-stress.

M: When did you do your first drawing?

X: My Mom once told me that in kindergarten I'd drawn a 'pretty eye' so you can say that it was my first time.

M: Why do you want to remain anonymous?

X: I guess I'm not very sure of my abilities to brag about.

M: What do you like drawing the most?

X: I like drawing people from various strange photo sessions such as the ones for Vogue (sometimes they're a bomb), but also photos by Daniel Vasquez - they are brilliant.

M: Except the pencil, what other tools do you use?

X: Recently I've begun to learn to paint with acrylic paints. Practical landscape painting.

M: Have you ever had drawing lessons?

X: If art lessons at school count, then yes. Telling the truth, I've never had enough time to sign up for a class, so the answer is no - I haven't.

M: Is there anything you would never draw?

X: Rather there's no subject that I wouldn't like to draw, let's say I'd try everything.

M: Do you associate your future with drawing or art in general?

X: I was thinking about this option for a while, but I'm not sure yet.

M: What is your biggest dream connected with drawing?

X: There are people who I admire in terms of artistic talent and if I got a compliment from them, I think I would frame it.

M: Can you give some advice for beginners in drawing?

X: I don't see myself in a position to give advice, but I think the most important thing is just to practice, you just need to draw whenever and wherever it's possible.

M: Thank you so much! It was so nice to talk to you!

X: The pleasure is all mine.
